

International Conference "Beyond Italy and New Spain"

(April 11, 2012)

BEYOND ITALY AND NEW SPAIN
 Itineraries for an Iberian Art History (1440-1640)

TALKS BY
 Pablo Francisco Amador Marrero (Instituto de Investigaciones Estéticas, UNAM, México), Joana Barreto (Villa Medice, Rome), Zena Beaugartee (Universidade Federal de São Paulo), Maria Mercedes Benard (Università degli Studi di Milano), Diane Bodart (Université de Poitiers), Sabela de Ceval (CICY Research Institute), Sylvie Desmarte-Roca (CNRS, Université de Lyon), Jesús Escobar (Northwestern University), Laura Fenucci (KHI Institute, Florence), Esteban García Brozos (Facultad de Filosofía y Letras, UNAM, México), Sergio Grunwald (CNRS, EHESS/Princeton University), Felipe Pereda (Johns Hopkins University), Agustina Rodríguez Romero (CONICET/UNSAM, Buenos Aires), Anetta Schaffer (Universität Bonn), Michael Schaffer (Virginia Commonwealth University), Sabrina Sircaceane (CONICET/UNSAM, Buenos Aires)

RESPONDENTS
 Thomas DeCote Kaufmann (Princeton University), Vidya Schele (Columbia University), Vittoria Di Palma (Columbia University), Keith Meezy (Harvard College), Jesús Rodríguez Velasco (Columbia University), Luke Syson (Metropolitan Museum of Art), Carl Ströhler (Philadelpia Museum of Art)

ORGANIZED BY
 Michael Cole and Alessandra Russo

WELCOMING ROMANES BY
 Ben Carlos J. Alcala (Columbia School of Arts and Sciences, Columbia University), Pamela Smith (Acting Academic Director, Italian Academy, Columbia University)

HOSTED BY
 Columbia University's Department of Art History and Archeology, Department of Latin American and Iberian Cultures, Hispanic Institute, and Italian Academy

CO-SPONSORED BY
 The Samuel H. Kress Foundation, The Harman Center at Columbia University, Universität Bonn, CONICET, Instituto de Investigaciones Estéticas, Northwestern University

April 27: 9:00 am - 6:30 pm
 April 28: 9:30 am - 5:00 pm

Columbia University
 The Italian Academy
 1161 Amsterdam Ave.
 New York, NY

Free and open to the public
 RSVP online at www.italianacademy.columbia.edu

THE ITALIAN ACADEMY

"Itineraries for an Iberian Art History (1440-1640)" Convened by Michael Cole and Alessandra Russo
 Hosted by Columbia University's Department of Art History and Archeology; Department of Latin American and Iberian Cultures, The Hispanic Institute, and the Italian Academy

This conference aims to open new dialogues on Iberian art and architecture from the decade that saw the Aragonese conquest of Southern Italy (1443) and the establishment of the first Portuguese trading station on the African island of Arguim (1449) to that of the separation of the Portuguese and the Spanish crowns (1640).

The two organizers — Michael Cole and Alessandra Russo — focus on different geographical areas and were motivated to undertake this project by a shared awareness of the fragmentation that currently characterizes a major field of art history — the study of sixteenth-century Iberian art and architecture. One of us started from a perspective on what is now the country of Italy, but which in the sixteenth-century belonged largely to Spain: the entire south, divided between the Kingdoms of Naples and Sicily, was ruled by Spanish viceroys; the Duchy of Milan had governors appointed by Spain; territories from the Republic of Genoa to the city-states of the northeast were essentially Spanish dependences. The other confronted the anachronistically national point of view that often guides the study of "Mexican," "Peruvian," "Brazilian" or "Indian" art history, when in fact these territories were under the Spanish and the Portuguese crowns. Referring to these territories as "colonial" possessions is equally unhelpful for conceiving them in a larger and more dynamic frame — what we call the "Iberian" atlas, which encompassed not only large parts of America, Africa and Asia, but also broad regions within Europe itself.

The participants in the conference will discuss artistic dynamics in or between at least two zones of the Iberian atlas (Portugal, Brazil, Flanders, Spain, Goa, Macao, Milan, Naples, Peru, the Philippines, Sicily, Sierra Leone, etc.). Themes will include the movement, reinstallation, and reinterpretation of images and objects; the materials of art making and their changing (or unchanging) meaning; printed and other reproductions and their relationship to new originals; the reinterpretation of architectural models in response to differing landscapes, labor conditions, technologies, and functional requirements; the travel of artists, patrons, and viewers; competing religious, political, intellectual, or patronage networks (Jesuits vs Franciscans, traders vs missionaries, Portuguese vs Dutch, etc.); the literature of art and its forms across space.

Source URL: <http://newsite.iitaly.org/magazine/events/reports/article/international-conference-beyond-italy-and-new-spain>

Links

[1] <http://newsite.iitaly.org/files/poster-beyonditaly1339390413jpg>